Climate change learning interventions are designed to help countries build resilience and reduce greenhouse gas emissions. These interventions can take many forms, including training, education, and public awareness-raising. The key elements of a climate change learning intervention are:

1. Content: The intervention should be based on sound science and address the specific needs of the target audience. It should be tailored to the local context and culture.

2. Delivery: The intervention should be delivered through a mix of channels, including face-to-face training, online learning, and community-based learning. It should be interactive and engaging.

3. Implementation: The intervention should be implemented in a way that is sustainable and scalable. It should be supported by local institutions and leaders.

4. Monitoring and Evaluation: The intervention should be monitored and evaluated to assess its impact and effectiveness. This information can be used to improve the intervention and inform future efforts.

ADDITIONAL INFORMATION

UN CC:Learn is a partnership of more than 30 multilateral organizations supporting countries to design and implement systematic, recurrent and results-oriented climate change learning. At the global level, the partnership supports knowledge-sharing, promotes the development of common climate change learning materials, and coordinates learning interventions through a collaboration of UN agencies and other partners. At the national level, UN CC:Learn supports countries in developing and implementing national climate change learning strategies. Through its engagement at the national and global levels, UN CC:Learn contributes to the implementation of Article 6 of the UNFCCC on training, education and public awareness-raising, and the 2012-2020 Doha Work Programme. Funding for UN CC:Learn is provided by the Swiss Government and UN partners. The Secretariat for UN CC:Learn is hosted by the UN Institute for Training and Research (UNITAR).
